

PAIGE, CAREY & CO.

Additional Attachments Sued Out Yesterday by Creditors.

THE TROUBLES AFFECT THE CITY.

Which may have to Complete the Construction of the Main Street Bridge Itself—Mechanics' Liens Piled up on It—All the Men Working for the Firm Stop.

The serious complications involving the financial affairs of the contractors, Paige, Carey & Co., as printed in the INTELLIGENCER yesterday, were the leading topic of conversation in the city yesterday. Naturally the chief subject of interest was the effect the troubles of the firm might have on the city's interests. The firm having the contract for the construction of the Main street bridge, it was a serious consideration what condition the state of affairs would leave the city in.

This inquiry became important when it was known that a number of other attachments had been sworn out yesterday on the firm's assets. An INTELLIGENCER reporter learned that little money was due the firm from the city aside from the twenty per cent withheld as surety out of all payments. In all there is stated to be about $33,000

IN THE HANDS OF THE CITY, which may be due to the firm if the work is finished. The attachments on which garnishee papers have been served on the city will cover all this.

Aside from these attachments, many small claims for wages due and the like, have exercised their right to file prior liens on the bridge. These will have to be satisfied.

City Engineer Hoze said, when asked by an INTELLIGENCER man, that he would not be surprised if the city had to take hold of the work and finish it. Captain Hallock owns the plant and is superintendent of the work, hired by Paige, Carey & Co. He can go ahead and complete the bridge for the city without interruption. The funds reserved will be ample for this.

There will be some novel points of law to settle before all the claims are satisfied.

Yesterday all the men working in the stone yard on the South Side, twenty-one in number, quit work, as did also all those working on the bridge. The Terminal company is said to owe the firm nothing. Some of the men, and most of the employees in responsible positions under the firm, claim that they have not been paid for months.

THE NEW ATTACHMENTS.

There have been many attachments in the local courts before the late crash. Yesterday the following were sued out in the circuit court, and garnishee notices served on the city and Terminal company:

A. J. Sweeney & Son	$ 86 16
Edward Smallwood, Ohio Stone Co.	54 19
L. G. Hallock	1,292 00
Thomas Conner	63 09
F. R. Haley	67 49
William Lathrop	2,750 00
E. R. Hitchcock	609 03
Robert C. Standford, surviving partner of Standford Bros.	2,493 89
Waterhouse Bros.	467 59
Marsh & Puleos	221 61
Verbeke & Hunt	703 40
Dr. J. C. Branch	421 77
L. A. Bell	417 69
Out Bros. & Co.	706 11
Charles H. Berry	607 32

In addition to these claims, suits were filed and attachments issued by several justices of the peace. Squire Arkle had four or five, Squire Caldwell a number, and Squire Phillips several. So far as they could be learned these were as follows:

A. A. Wheat	$101 00
Henry Lee	6 50
James McAdam	20 12
F. P. McNeil	12 00
John Walford	46 06
John Walford	134 25
Verbeke & Hunt	421 77
Dr. J. C. Branch	30 00
L. P. Kelly	10 50
G. Ritchie	43 00
A. J. McGarrell	156 00
Samuel Nesbitt	128 91
Dr. L. Decker	61 00
Frost, Campbell & Hart	121 00
Young Men's Democratic Club	50 00
Alonzo Martin Jacobucci	73 00

IS THE SIGNATURE GENUINE?

A special dispatch from Akron, Ohio, is printed below:

The report that there is $300,000 worth of fictitious paper against Paige, Carey & Co., indorsed by John Huntington, held by banks in this state and the east, is not believed in Akron, where David R. Paige did business until a few years ago. A gentleman who perhaps stands closer to Paige than any one in this city stated, Tuesday, that he knew Huntington had agreed to stand by Paige until his New York contract was settled, and he felt positive that every note bearing Huntington's signature was genuine. The same gentleman intimated that most of the trouble has been caused by bad blood between members of the Huntington family. He also claims that the suit brought by the Central national bank of Cleveland against David R. Paige and John Huntington for $7,307 57 was settled by the Huntington estate without protest, indicating that the note was not forged. It is also stated that two notes of several thousand dollars, bearing the indorsement of Paige and Huntington, are held by Akron banks, but all officials refuse to be interviewed. The cashier of one bank did say, however, that there were two such notes in Akron, but that he was familiar with John Huntington's signature and would swear that it was genuine.

A STORY FROM NEW YORK.

The following telegram from New York adds something to what has been said on the subject:

New York, March 30.—Another twist was added to-day to the tangled affairs of Paige, Carey & Co., contractors, at No. 42 Broadway, by a controverted statement about some of the firm's assets. The firm failed last summer. A dispatch from Cleveland, O., to-day stated that $285,000 worth of Paige, Carey & Co.'s notes had been discovered to be indorsed by John Huntington, the millionaire, and to be, therefore, as good as gold.

A cable message from Germany, where Mr. Huntington is, stated, however, that the amount of these notes out was only $75,000. David R. Paige is a brother of Ralph Paige, who is now under arrest at Cleveland, O., charged with the wrecking of the Painesville (O.) Savings and Loan Association, of which he was cashier and controlling spirit. The affairs of the brothers were mixed with those of Paige, Carey & Co. The firm had a large contract on the new aqueduct for New York, and needed money to carry on the work.

The notes which Mr. Huntington indorsed were made to meet the emergency, and the Painesville Savings and Loan Association, it is said, guaranteed the indorsement. When the association failed, its visible assets were about $700. D. R. Paige was a director of the defunct North River Bank, which went down in the fall of 1890. He was also interested in the Paige Tube Company, of Warren, O.; Paige Bros. & Co., of Akron, O.; Sterling Boiler Company, of New York; Frisch Process Soda Company and United Salt Co., of Cleveland; National Strawboard Company, of Chicago; and National Banks in Akron, Cleveland and Warren. His firm had contracts for building parts of the Norfolk & Western railroad, and for many other important works about the country.

One of the sub-contractors on the Norfolk & Western was a caller at the firm's office yesterday, and he came with an alleged claim of $100,000 for the work he had done.

LOCAL BRIEFINGS.

Matters of Minor Moment in and about the City.

OPERA HOUSE this evening—"Blue Jeans."

THE GRAND this evening—Williams & Orr's Meteors.

FRANK HENNIG and his company appear at Fairmont this evening.

Good progress is being made laying the twenty-inch water main over the Main street stone bridge. About half of it is completed.

The Democratic county committee is to meet this afternoon to decide whether to hold primaries or to choose county nominees in a convention.

McKEE, the cigar man, has put on the market a very fine cigar called "The Wheeling Press Club." The members appreciate the compliment.

GENERAL MANAGER N. W. Eayrs, of the Terminal road, who has been ill for some time past, is improving very rapidly, and expects to be out by Saturday.

While Louis Hafer, the South Side butcher, was hitching his horse to the wagon yesterday morning, the animal stepped on his foot and bruised it badly.

YESTERDAY was the auditing day for the month with the county commissioners. Nothing was done out of the routine but to transfer two saloon licenses in Fulton until the first of May.

YESTERDAY morning the wild geese could be heard in great numbers on all sides of the city "honking" for their morning's northern flight. It is a peculiar sound, and to one who has not heard it before, seems weird.

GEORGE CURTIS, a young lad thirteen years old living in North Wheeling, was sent to the reform school at Pruntytown yesterday morning by Squire Phillips. A deputy from the institution led the city with the boy.

CLERK Hook yesterday admitted to record a deed made March 30, by Ellen Moran to Patrick Myles and wife, for $900, the north 46 feet of the east 25 feet of lot 215, in S. W. Shriver's addition; also three deeds of trust.

The Wesley M. E. Church choir was handsomely entertained yesterday evening at the home of John Walford, on South Jacob street. The evening was spent in choir practice. Refreshments were served and a delightful time spent.

A PARTY was given last night by Mr. and Mrs. John Larkin at their home on Chapline street, near Thirty-sixth. The evening was spent in games and dancing. Refreshments were served, and the many friends present spent an enjoyable evening.

A SKIFF capsized in the river near the east pier of the steel bridge to the Island yesterday morning early. Three men in it were thrown into the water, but two escaped easily. The other nearly drowned, but was saved by a skiff sent out from the Belle Plaine.

An alarm was sent in to the fire department about 11 o'clock yesterday morning from box No. 15, on North Main street. The department was soon on the scene, but its services were not needed, as the blaze was caused only by the soot burning out in a fire in a house adjoining P. Winter's tailor shop.

FOUR cases were up before the mayor yesterday. George Reed, bartender at Porter's saloon, was arraigned for beating up and shooting at Pat Kelly. Pat was fined $3 and costs and Reed dismissed. Harry Kennedy, for disorder, was fined $2 and costs and went to the hill. Claude Meredith, who refused to "move on," paid $1 and costs.

TUESDAY evening about 9 o'clock a twelve-year-old girl named Stein was on her way home up Main street, and when she reached the alley between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets a man seized her and attempted to force her into the alley. She screamed and her cries brought out the neighbors and the villain made off. The police were notified, but no clue has been found.

ISAAC THOMPSON, of South Chapline street, met with a painful accident at the Wheeling wharf. He was unloading a wagon when a drove of cattle was passing. Thompson's foot slipped and he fell to the ground. Just as he fell the whole drove of cattle ran over him. He was rendered unconscious for a few moments but quickly rallied and was taken in the wagon to the office of Drs. Manley and Ridgway, on South Chapline street. Thompson had a bad cut over the left eye, which caused the eyelid to fall over the cheek.

THE SALVATION ARMY'S

Methods Explained by Mrs. Ballington Booth.

A WORK OTHER CHURCHES FAIL IN

Successfully Prosecuted by the Salvation Army—Its Recruits Sought, not from Among the Members of other Churches, but from among the Lowly—Its Methods Defended as Appropriate to their Object.

Mrs. Ballington Booth shed a new light on the Salvation Army yesterday evening, in her talk at the Fourth Street Methodist church. She did not deny the familiar methods of the Army, nor did she seek to excuse them; but she boldly admitted that the customs might seem absurd to those trained up in the prevailing religions of the day, and then showed convincingly that the bass drum, the tambourine, the processions and the street corner meetings were but means to an end, and for the accomplishment of that end were not only useful, but even necessary. And when this young, pretty and cultured woman, the daughter of a clergyman of the Established Church of England, reared and brought up amid religious surroundings even less emotional than those to which her hearers were accustomed, told how by actual observation she had been constrained to see the good worked by the Salvation Army among the lowly, there was probably no one in the immense audience who did not abandon his preconceived prejudices and adopt the opinion of Mrs. Booth, that the Salvation Army, among the class, which only it seeks to attract and convert, is doing a great and magnificent work.

Mrs. Booth spoke an hour and a half, but rarely has a preacher had a more attentive congregation, and one that displayed such unflinching interest to the end. No doubt much of the attention shown was due to from an undeniably authentic source, of the tenets and methods of the Salvation Army, and the measures for the execution of which it is organized, but Mrs. Booth herself, her platform presence, her earnest and at times eloquent delivery, were the greatest attraction, that held the audience's interest.

Mrs. Booth said that it always gave her great pleasure to speak; she had great confidence, not in herself but her mission. As she had given her life to the cause, she was always glad of an opportunity to tell of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Booth herself was, at one time, a critic of the Army; she was far removed from it, as far as ecclesiastical ideas were concerned, and she once felt as people now feel about it. It was not so much the success, or the great numbers in its ranks, but the spirit of the Salvation Army that Mrs. Booth wished to bring before her hearers, the spirit of those who had cast aside all chances in life, so far as the world is concerned. "On the great morning of the resurrection," she said, "it will not be asked: 'What did you do?' but, 'in what spirit did you do it?'"

Schreely anything vile or bad that was said about the Salvation Army had failed to come to Mrs. Booth's ears; scarcely any of the newspaper paragraphs written about it had failed to reach her ears. The remarks, fancies, fallacies and lies served however a good purpose, in that it gave the soldiers of the army a chance to stand up and refute them. She well knew there were many misunderstandings about the movement, for in her travels of thousands of miles she had learned to know this; what surprised her, however, was that in the nineteenth century, the age of enlightenment and thought, so many people would bicker and quibble at so many little things.

CHARACTERISTICS OF THE ARMY.

which, after all, were only means to an end, and not forget them in the presence of the work which had been and was being done by the army. She told how her opinion had been changed by the conversion of the bad man of an English seaport town, a regular desperado, by the efforts of two young girls, captains in the Salvation Army. From that day she never listened to a word said against the army, and always recognized the good it did. Among the class the army labored it did a work that the church failed to do.

The ten years she had spent as an officer in the Army seemed to her like thirty or forty. There one sees so much that makes one old, so much vice, so much wretchedness, so many sorrows; it shows the grave problems, but also shows their solution; it shows the power of infidelity, the power of vice and drink, but it also shows one key that will open the human heart, it shows a power that will transform the vilest, and it is obeying the command: "Go out into the highways and hedges."

The Salvation Army, Mrs. Booth claimed, does not go into the folds to get other people's sheep; it doesn't fish in other waters, but it goes among the outcasts who do not know God and even hate religion; as these people won't go to the army, the army must go to it. It works on difficult, material, and the work requires real effort and very often real suffering. The soldiers of the army go to hearts steeped against them, that hate religion, and want none of it, so that their friends have to depend on one power, the power of living sympathy. They find men who seem to have lost all respect for all that is good; mothers who have lost all vestige of mother love; children who are more like little fiends than human beings. But in almost all hearts

THERE IS ONE WARM SPOT.

Though that is often hard to find. Though Mrs. Booth has been all over the worst parts of London, she claims that there are places in New York that put "Darkest London" to shame. The Salvation Army, as explained by Mrs. Booth, goes down among the lowest people, even into the saloons, if there are any reserved in the meeting-houses, they are for the drunkards. The Salvation Army thinks that a reformed drunkard talks better to drunkards, than the man who has not had the drunkard's experience; one who has been in prison and has become converted, talks in a way more easily understood by other criminals, than does the man who is free from crime.

The methods adopted by the army, of beating drums and tambourines, and singing songs on the streets, were best adapted to the work the army was trying to do. Mrs. Booth asserted; the very fact that these methods bore very little aspect of religion caused many of the people the army was seeking to come to the meetings; when once there, the soldiers of the army would try to hold them. They had learned to be independent of public opinion, and there-in lay their power.

The measures objected to not have been rushed into in a haphazard way. The army is regularly organized, and all its divisions do not do as they please, but according to a certain plan. At headquarters a record is kept of what is going on in 500 different cities, it is known how many soldiers there are, how many have professed conversion, how many have been stricken off. Mrs. Booth was particular in wanting her hearers to understand, that the Salvation Army was not seeking to but was trying to do what these failed to do. She said that the army's marching was objected to, but she failed to see why the Odd Fellows, for instance, could march with banners and music, and the Salvation Army not. The drum was at one time used by the Pilgrim fathers, when they had no bells, and she thought the army was only following illustrious example. She denied indignantly the charges going through the newspapers that blasphemous words were sung in the Salvation Army tunes, or that the name of Jesus Christ was used with blasphemy. She characterized the story as a lie forged against the Salvationists by those who know it to be a lie when they uttered it. The songs, were simple, she admitted, but they had sung their way into many a poor heart that had never been touched by prayer or preaching.

The uniform that so many objected to, Mrs. Booth farther explained, was worn for a purpose. Wherever a soldier of the Salvation is, people know him by his uniform. Her uniform enabled her to cross the city of New York at any time of the night, without molestation. If she went into a saloon without her uniform, in ordinary dress, she would be exposed to all manner of insults, whereas her uniform protected her. Then again, a reformed drunkard might be tempted to go into a saloon for a drink, but would scarcely dare to do so while in uniform.

The risks that the Army girls run are not so great as supposed; they go into saloons and dens of iniquity, because their purity and virtue is needed most. Strangers from other cities have been thrown out of the saloons of New York for insulting a Salvation sister. "No Salvation Army girl," Mrs. Booth said, "ever came to harm by going into saloons."

Mrs. Booth will speak this evening at the First Presbyterian church, and her subject will be "The Slums of New York." She has had the opportunity to observe much of this dark side of American life, and her talk will be replete with interest.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Strangers in the City and Wheeling Folks Abroad.

Postmaster Cowden is slightly under the weather.

F. T. Martin, of Fairmont, was at the McLure yesterday.

Dr. G. A. Aschman has removed his office and residence to No. 60 Fourteenth street.

C. R. Gibson, of Sutton, and W. H. Clark, of Huntington, stopped at the Behler yesterday.

W. S. McCollough, the South Side druggist, is confined to his home in Bellaire by sickness.

Harry Hardy, manager, and Dave Friedman, agent of the "Uncle Hiram" company, are at the Windsor.

Hon. N. K. Kennon, of St. Clairsville, a kinsman of Mr. Hennig's, took in the "Hamlet" matinee yesterday.

Mr. Oscar Howard, an old time typo of this city, left for his home in Louisville, Ky., yesterday afternoon.

William Bougher, agent of the American Express Company, leaves to-day to take charge of the American's office at Springfield, O.

L. O. Talbott and daughter, of Charleston; Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Martin and Philip Martin, of Moundsville, are guests of the Stamm House.

Mr. W. H. Rodgers, the enterprising merchant of Brilliant, Ohio, accompanied by his wife and daughter, were in the city yesterday, and attended the Hennig matinee.

J. F. Lantry, of the firm of Lantry Brothers, returned yesterday from Pittsburgh, where he has accepted a position as traveling man with W. & H. Walker, soap manufacturers. He starts out on Monday, and will make his headquarters here. Mr. Lantry's many friends wish him success.

Tom Wilson, of the Wheeling "Solid Comfort Club," was in the city to-day, his object being to confer with President William Sharp, of this city, in regard to the good of the order generally. Sharp, however, had very important business in Bellaire and did not show up at the conference.—Steubenville Herald.

Among the members of Mr. Hennig's company is Miss Kathleen Kerrigan, a young lady of marked ability, who is sure to accomplish a great deal in her profession, as she is both talented and beautiful. She is, as yet, doing small parts with Mr. Hennig, as she is just recovering from a severe illness of several weeks duration.
